

Amendments to Abstract:

Please cancel the original Abstract and replace it with the following:

An improved method for creating, editing and printing pages of a publication includes the use of a first computer system which contains images and data related to the images and a second remote computer which can access the data and images. Low-resolution versions of the images are used to carry out certain communications between the first and second computers. The first computer automatically replaces the low-resolution version of the images with a high-resolution version of the images for printing of the pages. The first computer also automated selects and groups images in a page layout based upon instructions received from the second computer.